

As we know, when chatting on a cell phone many people tend to speak louder than they would normally. In the tight confines of an airplane, some people are going to find this stressful. I suspect that "air rage", which is already increasingly common will become a greater threat to passenger and flight attendants safety if cell phone use is allowed aboard aircrafts.